Assistant: According to the provided context from the EU Parliament – General Purpose AI document, Artificial Intelligence (AI) is defined as: > “the capacity of computers, or other machines, to exhibit intelligent behaviour.” This means AI systems are designed to appear to think, learn, and act like humans, and in some cases, they may even exceed human capabilities. The document also highlights that there is no single, universally accepted definition of AI, but this explanation from the Oxford English Dictionary is referenced as a key interpretation. Would you like more details on how the EU is regulating AI (e.g., the AI Act) or other aspects mentioned in the context? ■
